Gntp Video Series Highlights Research

As the Brain Institute prepares for their second admissions cycle for FAU's Graduate Neuroscience Training Program (Gntp), they've created a video series to highlight faculty in the program. The videos give prospective students a chance to learn more about FAU's neuroscience research and the faculty members they may work with in the program. Gntp is the new umbrella program launched in December 2017 that offers students opportunities to sample multiple, distinct thematic areas during their first-year, while also accommodating the more experienced student with a deeper dive into specific areas.
